MESSAGE

Dear Members of the Munger University Family,

The Book of Ecclesiastes teaches us, "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven." My season (tenure) as Vice-Chancellor of Munger University is on the verge of completion. Nevertheless, I am petitioning the powers that be to measure my term in office in dog years rather than normal human years, given the profound challenges that we have weathered together, and the proud accomplishments that we have achieved together, over these extraordinary three years.

I am enormously grateful to the staff of our university. To the custodians who clean our buildings, the housekeepers who maintain the domain, to the administrative assistants and staff who manage all manner of tasks, and to all the rest of those who comprise the extraordinarily dedicated group of individuals who make Munger University run every day, I say thank you. You are the backbone of this University, and may we never forget your contributions to this divine institution.

I am enormously grateful to the students of Munger University who have positively touched my life. All of us who are devoted educators are passionate about helping young people to develop themselves and to find their destiny.

A big thank you to the Officers of the University and their support staff, Professor-in-Charge's of various Colleges, faculty members and staff of different colleges who work daily with our students, helping them grow into adults of character and consequence. Your work in the classroom and on the academic fields, in the labs and on the stage, on field studies and in professional seminars and every other place where you engage students is where the essential work of our university happens.

My three-year tenure weaves a story, reinforcing my belief that we are the makers of the Vikshit Bharat by 2047. Let us logically choose to save our institutions and all other resources to benefit our younger generations. Let's come together and build a beautiful tomorrow.

These relationships are at the core of the Munger University experience. Watching you conjure this special alchemy under the most challenging of circumstances over the last three years has been aspirational and inspiring. I respect you and honour you for your determination, dedication and passion for making an academic change during my tenure.

With Best Wishes,

Jai Hind!

(Prof. Shyama Roy)
